

What is fracking?

The special silica sand mined in Iowa for oil and gas exploration is shipped by rail and truck to other states to be used in hydraulic fracturing. Iowa has no “fracking” for oil and gas at this point, though the technique has been used for some water wells in the state. Here is a depiction of how fracking works.

